

Armen Mazmanyán, PhD

Armen Mazmanyán is an international human rights lawyer and legal writer and is the Director of the Center for Constitutional Studies in Yerevan, Armenia. He holds a PhD from the European University Institute and has done postdoctoral work in the University of Antwerp (2010-2011), Columbia and Harvard Universities (2012-2013). He focuses on constitutional developments and democratic transition in post-authoritarian settings, especially concentrating on post-communist countries. His most recent articles, “Failing Constitutionalism” (Global Constitutionalism, Cambridge) and “Judicialization of Politics: Post-Soviet Way” (forthcoming in the International Journal of Constitutional Law: ICON-Oxford), discuss the patterns of constitutional politics and constitutional adjudication in formerly Soviet countries, including Ukraine.